Calling for EOI from Public Artists

The City of Nedlands is seeking expressions of interest from suitably experienced artists to create a contemporary public artwork that will pay tribute to health care workers who have supported the community through the COVID-19 pandemic.

Deadline for EOI submissions is 2pm, 20 October 2021.

The EOI document with full details for submission requirements is at nedlands.wa.gov.au/public-art. For further information, please contact Alison Barrett at abarrett@netspace.net.au

Hello friends,

This is an exciting month for all of us as it is Local Government Election time. Election packages have been sent to all eligible households, but in the event your package has been damaged or lost, a replacement can be arranged.

This year we have some incredible people running for the office of Councillor and I encourage you all to vote. As our borders remain shut, our focus is on a local future. This means we will all need to work together for Nedlands to be the best city in the world. This is an opportunistic time. We have a head start because our city is full of natural beauty and super smart people and with this in mind, it is crucial to have a motivated and varied skill set around the council table. Councillors are your voice and your 'go to' in local government.

Local government is of paramount importance and is one of the essential tiers of democracy because it is the closest to society. You can come in and speak and we will listen. You cannot do this with Federal or State Government.

So please, this election, speak up. I ask you most kindly to get out and vote. The City of Nedlands is already on a come-back and with greater community support at the grassroots level, anything is possible.

With many kind wishes to you all,

Fiona Argyle
Mayor, City Of Nedlands
