Volunteers of the Natural Area Friends Group honoured in event

Members of the City of Nedlands Natural Area Friends Groups who have volunteered their valuable time to conserve and restore the City's natural areas were honoured at an appreciation event on Saturday at Point Resolution.

The City of Nedlands Mayor Max Hipkins, Councillors Bill Hassel, Robert Binks and City staff also attended to show their appreciation.

Invitees and City delegates were treated to a bird walk with David Free from Birdlife Australia where they witnessed an Osprey being attacked by a group of Ravens and Silver Gulls.

Mayor Max Hipkins said: "Each year the volunteers give up their time to look after the City's natural areas. It's thanks to them and the City's staff and their dedication and the wonderful work that they do together, that we are able to continue to enjoy these areas."

The City has five friends groups who volunteer their valuable time every year to help conserve and restore the City's natural areas. If you would more information about the groups please contact the City or go to the Urban Bushland Website www.bushlandperth.org.au/member-groups.
